Extract from "THE ENGINEER," May 12, 1871, page 320
"The ram-head works against a fixed toothed face, and, if there were nothing more, stones put into the hopper would be simply crushed between the two—much as in Hake's machine. But here the similarity ends. It has been found that what we may best term a chewing action materially facilitates the breakage of the stones, and this chewing action is obtained by mounting the ram-head and its thrust-bar or handle on an eccentric close to the head. The motion attained by the use of this countric produces the precise effect required very efficiently. All the arrangements are very simple and mechanical and the machine appears to have nothing about it to get out of order. We were much pleased with it."

It is pated the entire structure will cost in rightorhood of $100,000. According to the provisions of the Confed-ation Act, the representation of the entire emision is about to be remodelled on the sit of population according to the late connial census. The Province of Quebec attinues to have the same number of represen-tatives, viz: 65, and the unit of represen-tion is determined by dividing the popula-tion of the Province by the number of its presentatives, and in this way determining the the Previnces whether their number legislators shall be increased or dimin-ted. The Globe says the dissolution of Parliament's will take place immediately after the close of the session, and the polling may be expected to occur from the middle of July to the middle of Angust. Orrawa, May 21 .- The Speaker took the beir at three o'clock.

The House made some progress yesterday a Committee of Supply. After adopting the innince Minister's resolution to abolish the sa and coffee duties, Mr. Bedwell moved his potion on the representation of Sir Francis lines that the semoval of the ten and coffee uties would exhaust his prospective surplus of 1872-3. ONE AND A HALF MILES FROM TOWN THE DEBATE ON THE RAILWAY BILL On the motion to receive the report of the Committee of the Whole upon the Canadian Pacific Railway resolutions, Sir George E. Cartier moved two amendments suggested by some observations from Mr. Blake; the first providing that the payments of the subsidy should be made by installments commensurate with the progress of the work; he second that the grant of land to the Manitoba Southern Branch should not exceed 20,000 acres per mile, and to the Lake Superior Branch 25,000 acres per mile, Mr. Mackenste then, in a short but vigorous speech, recapitulated some of the objections to the scheme of the Government. He reminded the House of Sir George E. Cartier's boast that the Governor in Council was "a great institution," and warned the House of reposing in the Government such extraordinary powers as the warned the House of reposing in the Government such extraordinary powers as the Ministry were seeking to obtain. He sought to impress on members that in the end time would be saved by a complete and perfect survey preceding any arrangements for the construction of the road. He urged, too, that the work should be commenced at points where the progress would be most easy and rapid, and most quickly communicate with existing American lines. The scheme was at the present time incohate and crude; nothing would be gained by recklessness, and no time would be gained by recklessness, and no time would be lost by carrying on the survey during the present year and coming.

FROM LOSS OR DAMAGE RY FIRE nothing would be gained by recklessness, and no time would be lost by carrying on the survey during the present year and coming down with a complete scheme as to the line of route and other arrangements at the commencement of the ensuing session. So gigantic an undertaking should not be commenced without the direct sanction of Parliament. The results of the Intercolonial were sufficient proof of the necessary of Parliamentary control. Sir George admitted Mr. Mackensie's suggestions were worthy of consideration, but gave no sign of the Government intending to profit by them. Mr. Young delivered an able speech, chiefly directed to showing that the cost of the scheme was underestimated. He believed that undue haste and want of full enquiry would enhance the cost twenty-five per or even thirty per cent. He reviewed the cost of the Grand Trunk, the Union Pacific, and other lines; and read at length from the report of Mr. Sandford Fleming to show that the cost of the work would probably not be less than one bundred million. ing to show that the cost of the work would probably not be less than one bundred millions. He regarded the present demand as cally the thin end of the wedge, and had no doubt when the elections were over they would hear of a much larger aum being required. Mr. Young then stated his objections to looking up so large as amount of land over and above that required for the railway grant, and in conclusion pointed out that, as the company making the line will also have to work it, the proposed capital of $10,000,-000, with only $1,000,000 paid up, was not sufficient guarantee to the pointry for the due accomplishment of the agreement. After a few mords from Mr. Forguson Mr. Gumberland recited a speech in his soul pompowe style, carefully evading the real issue; but in a few words from Mr. Forguson Mr. Cumberland recited a speech in his west pempone style, carefully evading the real issue; but in a series of finely-rounded phrases and carefully prepared witticisms, he failed to conceal his intense anxiety for a share in the thirty million largess now on the eve of distribution. Mr. Anglin arged that, if committed to the duty of making theread, it was not necessary the House should adopt in detail every scheme submitted it. Mr. A. P. McDonald having spoken, Mr. D. A. Macdonald moved an amendment to the effect that the route of the proposed line should be submitted for the approval of Parliament. He supported his mation by referring terms discusous blander made by the Government in the selection of the Intercolonial route. The House at once divided, and the motion was defeated by years 30, nays 53. Mr. Mackenzie reminded Mr. Cumberland, when discussing questions of this kind, to forget he was an extreme party man, and spoke to the real question at issue. He than went on to say that if the House passed the recolutions in their present state they would practically be abdicating their faketions. He closed a speech in favor of preserving Parliamentary authority over all important affairs by moving to refer the resolutions back in order to provide that all contracts for the construction of the line should important affairs by moving to refer the resolutions back in order to provide that all contracts for the construction of the line should be first submitted to Parliament, and that the clause giving powers to the Governor in Council to charter a company for the paragraph of building and working the line should be expunged. This amendment was defeated by years, 39; nays, 82. Mr. Young then moved an amendment to prevent the locking up of the first million nerse of land, which the Gayerament proposed to take under their scatter, in addition to the grant to the railway. This was defeated by year, 30 pays, 36. The resolutions were then read a second time and the House adjourned.

Dr. Catroll, the singeon of the Scont, was next examined, and said he was called by the senty shortly after midnight on Wednesday to examine the deceased. Went to the cabin of the gunner, where he found the deceased stretched upon a bed, with the whole front of his skull smashed right in; life was all but extinct, and half of his brain was blown away. The cause of his death was the bullet shot; saw the mark of the ball in the toof of the cabin. In his opinion the manner in which he shot himself was that he sat down, putting the muzzle of the rifle to his tar, and tonched the trigger, either with his fager are piece of pencil. From the course the ball took, he thought the rifle would be at about an angle of 45°. The wound was an oblique one, from right to left.

The Doctor went on to describe the wound, which he stated was caused by the bullet; respiration continued for about four minutes after the accident. From the appearance of the wound the rifle must have been close to his head.

By the Foreman—Never noticed anything peculiar about Sill; he had not seen much of him on beard, as he was always in good health; from the very nature of the act he should consider him irresponsible at the time he committed it.

Captain Cator then came forward and said that he wished that the fullest particulars should go before the world. On the back of the photographs feft by the deceased was some writing which cast aspersions on the character of the lirst Lieutenant of the ship, which he (Captain Cator) wished to state were wholly numerited. The deceased had never been ill-treated by the First Lieutenant or any other officer on board the ship. The photographs had been found in the gunner's cabin and given to him by the First Lieutenant as was his duty. On the back of one of them was written a letter by the deceased to a relative, in which he stated that owing to the ill-treatment he had experienced from the First Lieutenant of the ship he had at first determined to shoot him; but that he safterwards thought better. The note was signed "for the last time, Sill."

Captain Cator further stated that he had always considered the deceased peculiar when always considered the deceased peculiar when the officers had had occassion to report his con-
